

Prof. Dr. Badir Namaa Akash Albadran

Professor Dr. Badir Namaa Akash Albadran obtained a bachelor's degree in geology in 1977 from the University of Mosul, Iraq. He received a master's degree from the University of Nice in France in 1983 and a doctorate from the same University of Nice in France in 1986 on the sedimentology specialization. He worked at the University of Basrah/ Marine Science Center and obtained the professor title in 2000. In 2004, he moved to the College of Science at the same university until he retired in 2000. He supervised dozens of doctoral dissertations. He published more than 54 research papers, as well as two books and four chapters in international publications. He held several administrative positions during his service at the University of Basrah. Now, after retirement, he works at Almaaqal Private University and holds the position of university chancellor.